The event is the official kick-off of the 2009 Mosquito Bed Nets Appeal, One Net One Life.

During the "Meet and Greet" with Cissa Wa Numbe, you can hear firsthand about Congo, why the Congo is important, and how we can help prevent malaria by fund raising for mosquito bed nets. You can also meet The Congo Cause core team who work to organize events, bring awareness, and facilitate partnerships to promote The Congo Cause's mission.

UNA-DRC is supported by The Congo Cause (grass roots partner) to bring awareness to the United States about the challenges faced by the Congolese people. The Congo Cause began as a graduate project with graduate students from the University of Michigan-Flint in the Technology in Education: Global Program where graduate students created meaningful humanitarian projects using technology for educating and bringing awareness about topics of global importance. The graduate Global Program included six classes (Summers 2007 & 2008) with international residency in Geneva, Switzerland.

During March to May of 2009, The Congo Cause will focus on supporting UNA-DRC's malaria prevention project through fund raising for mosquito bed nets. The Congo Cause team has a goal of expanding the mosquito bed nets project into schools, universities and civic groups. As we extend our love and service, we enhance our sense of global awareness and appreciation of democracy and civic life, while helping to save lives from malaria in Congo.
